

MAGIC LANTERN: Film & Photography in the Central West

The posed image is where people know they are being photographed and change their behaviour for the photo. It is like being told to smile for a family portrait. Posed photos tell us a lot about how people want to be seen. Choose two posed photos - quickly sketch and label them, and then write down three adjectives (feeling words) each posed photo gives you.

Choose a different posed photo. Look carefully at the clothes the people are wearing in the photo. Now find a candid (unposed) photo. Write down the difference in the clothes they are wearing. Why do you think they are different / similar? How do you think people normally dressed?

Differences in the clothing:

They are different because:

Which clothes do they wear everyday? Why?
